SASKATCHEWAN ACCESS TO LEGAL INFORMATION

Saskatchewan Access to Legal Information (SALI) Initiative

Legal problems are common. Legal information helps.

Would the members of the public you assist benefit from having access to information about the law or knowing about options for legal assistance? SALI can help. Legal information helps people learn about their legal problems, ways of resolving legal problems, and legal rights and responsibilities.

Saskatchewan's Access to Legal Information (SALI) initiative partners with community organizations and information providers who work with the public to amplify legal information and assistance options. We help the helpers.

We publish a newsletter, provide training, and create resources to help organizations like yours connect the public with information about the law, options for legal assistance, and community support. We invite you to learn about SALI.

2023 Saskatchewan Access to Justice Week

Saskatchewan Access to Justice (SK A2J) Week is an annual event that engages communities across the province in a conversation about improving access to justice. Many justice stakeholders and organizations throughout Saskatchewan are proud contributors to the week.

This year's event, the 8th Annual SK A2J Week, emphasizes inclusivity and data-informed change and aims to engage new and diverse voices and to highlight initiatives working to improve access to justice for Saskatchewan residents.

We invite the public, law students, and members of the justice community to get involved in the week's many events and join the conversation.
