Graduate Spotlight:

Juhli Ann Francis-Singh, Esq.

The road to becoming a Rattler for Justice was paved with perseverance, for Juhli Ann Francis-Singh. It was also paved with a four-hour daily commute. The Fall 2025 graduate balanced a full-time job and family as an evening student.

“The journey ahead is one that is only as successful as you make it," said Francis-Singh. “The support is available and there around you, but it is up to you to take advantage of everyday opportunities to be successful."

Francis-Singh, who chose to attend FAMU College of Law because she wanted an education experience with support and opportunities, found herself in need of an unexpected level of support.

“Law school has been an extremely difficult journey," said Francis-Singh. “The peak of my struggles came my third semester of law school when my son was diagnosed with autism, and I struggled to find stable care and services for him which lead to my GPA falling below the minimum for the semester. With the help of my advisor putting systems in place and giving myself grace, I was able to improve my grades and get back on track in school."

Beyond the law school courses, Francis-Singh learned a bump in the road is no reason to give up.

“This experience taught me that if you want something bad enough you have to fight continuously for it," said Francis-Singh.
