

Port Authority Spec Building Announced

The Lancaster Port Authority has announced they have a speculative industrial project in Rock Mill Industrial Park set to break ground this summer. This 50,000 square-foot building is hopeful to attract new industry, support job creation, and aid in future economic growth.

The building is designed for expansion as well, with opportunity for an additional 50,000 square feet. This project follows the Port Authority's 2016 spec building, which has successfully served both Magna Seating and Chiyoda Integre currently.

By investing in ready-for-occupancy industrial space, the Port Authority continues to position Lancaster as a competitive location for businesses looking to establish or expand operations.
