Companionship is a practice of presence and is rooted in our natural capacities as humans to act on our concern for another person.

Companionship is a relational response to isolation and distress, supportive of healing and recovery.

Companionship is not about “fixing” but instead welcomes the stranger, building a circle of care with individuals who are facing emotional and mental health challenges.

A fee of $20 covers the cost of materials.

Scholarships are available.*

Training instructor: Amy McNicholas, LCPC, Faith and Mental Health Program
Specialist for Advocate-Aurora Health.
