a poem for Celebrate Babies Week

A Circle of Care

A baby arrives, so small, so new,
And a whole community gathers too.
A hand to hold, a song to sing,
A thousand little acts of caring.

For babies grow through love and time,
Through patient arms and hearts that shine.
Through family, friends and neighbors near—
The people who say, We are here.

So celebrate babies, their joy and their start,
And everyone nurturing each little heart.
For every child deserves to know:
They're held by a village as they grow.
