CCC2023 OPENING PLENARY Rising Up: Thriving as an LGBT+ Person in the Corporate World

While societies across the globe are making both legal and cultural progress towards embracing the Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual and Trans communities, the corporate world remains a difficult place to navigate for LGBT+ people. This plenary session will set the stage by outlining the obstacles LGBT+ people face in the workplace and how these obstacles may be further exacerbated by intersectional issues such as gender and ethnicity. The panel, comprised of successful LGBT+ professionals, will then focus on the importance of empowerment and self-advocacy, and discuss ways that anyone can leverage their unique identity to create an authentic and marketable image, make valuable connections, and build community, gain visibility and recognition, and advance their career while becoming a leader. The panel will conclude with actionable steps for LGBT+ people looking to rise in the corporate world as well as actionable steps for allies and mentors looking to cultivate an inclusive work environment.

Fending Off Mass Arbitration: Preventive and Responsive Defense Strategies

Mass arbitration is a new tactic of plaintiff's firms that file hundreds or thousands of arbitration demands against a company simultaneously in hopes of leveraging the prospect of arbitration fees to force a settlement. Massive fees, unfavorable processes for mass arbitration filings, and a judiciary that has been largely unresponsive to companies & challenges to such filings have emboldened the plaintiff's bar. Indeed, threats of initiating mass arbitration filings alone have extracted eight- and nine-figure settlements from some companies.

This panel will discuss the development of this phenomenon following U.S. Supreme Court precedent blessing arbitration clauses and class action waivers in consumer and employment agreements, best practices for efficiently managing mass arbitrations, recent court challenges to mass arbitration filings, and how companies can revise their arbitration provisions to mitigate the risks of mass arbitration.

The Places You'll Go: Tips for Non-linear Legal Careers

Many of us are confident in the legal career we'd like to pursue but not all of us. Join the panel of experienced attorneys to discuss tips on navigating a legal career. Discussion will be focused on what law students can do to prepare but also how lawyers can pivot their career trajectories. We will discuss how to embrace a non-linear career path and still get the job you want or practice in different fields; How to make the transition from government to private practice, from litigation to privacy, or from law firm to in-house; and how to seamlessly navigate the complexities of an ever-changing world and profession.

Martha's Vineyard and Beyond: Current Immigration Issues

On September 14, 2022, approximately 50 migrants were dropped off unannounced to Martha's Vineyard via two charter planes, dispatched by Florida Governor Ron DeSantis. As soon as news spread, legal advocates and community members stepped up to provide assistance and legal support to the families. This panel will explore legal perspectives on the crisis and discuss what unfolded on Martha's Vineyard, the mobilization efforts on the ground, and the legal action being taken in response to assist the asylum-seekers individually, as well as collectively, through a federal class action lawsuit filed on behalf of the affected migrants by Lawyers for Civil Rights. Panelists will also provide an overview of general immigration trends, including recent developments at the border and the important role played by private counsel in pro bono cases.

AFTERNOON PLENARY: The United States-Mexico Partnership and the Role of the HNBA

The HNBA began its life as a local organization of lawyers from California. The HNBA has since cultivated a national reputation, reach, and impact. At the same time, the HNBA recognizes the immense number and talent of Hispanic lawyers who practice internationally. These international lawyers are an integral part of the legal profession with whom we should ally on issues of common interest. The HNBA recently recreated Special Committee for Foreign Trained Attorneys. The timing is rich with meaning. The United States and Mexico recently celebrated 200 years of diplomatic relations and the HNBA just celebrated its 50th anniversary. In the words of President Biden, "[a]s the closest of neighbors and friends, we share a set of values that form the root of our strength. We share an enduring commitment to freedom, democracy, and rule of law. And we share a strong and deepening economic and security partnership that has made North America the most competitive and dynamic region in the world." This Plenary will examine the vital partnership between Mexico and the United States and the role that the HNBA can play to strengthen ties between U.S. lawyers, businesses, and non-profits with their counterparts in Mexico.

Protecting Competitive Interests in a World Without Non-Competes
 With states increasingly curtailing - and even penalizing - the use of non-compete agreements, businesses must look for other means of protecting themselves against unfair competition. This panel will explore the changing landscape in state law and discuss the remaining legal tools available to businesses. We will explore how businesses can draft and enforce enhanced non-solicitation, non-disclosure, and other provisions in ways that stay ahead of recent trends in competition law while maintaining hard-earned competitive advantages - perhaps even more efficiently than the status quo ante.

Expanding Influence of Artificial Intelligence: Developing Legal Trends - Employment, Privacy and Ethical Issues
 With the proliferation of artificial intelligence in the business community, companies are facing novel legal issues and there is a rapid expansion of regulatory efforts designed to govern the use of artificial intelligence. For example, many companies use automated decision tools to streamline the hiring process, but a newly enacted NYC law effective January 1, 2023 sets a legal standard for conducting and publicizing bias audits on these tools and the EEOC is launching an AI initiative to ensure that tools used in hiring comply with federal civil rights laws. Further, companies are using AI more and more in various ways, including customer service, advertisements, handling internal and external data, making recommendations to consumers, developing new technologies (such as self-driving cars), implementing fraud detection issues, and on supply chain issues. All of these uses of AI can create novel forms of interaction between people and technology that can result in legal complications across industries, with particular impact in the employment, privacy, and consumer advertising/product space.
