

Megan Kuhlmeier, AuD

Megan Kuhlmeier is the Director of Cochlear Implants and Pediatric Audiology at Columbia University Medical Center and serves as Assistant Professor of Audiology. Dr. Kuhlmeier is well respected in the field has practiced in New York City for over seventeen years in the area of cochlear Implants and pediatric audiology. She has worked at Beth Israel Medical Center, and most recently The New York Eye & Ear Infirmary of Mount Sinai where she served as a Supervisor of Audiology for seven years. She has a clinical focus on pediatric audiology, pediatric amplification and cochlear implants. Dr. Kuhlmeier specializes in early intervention of hearing loss and works with other professionals for a multi-disciplinary approach to treatment.

Dr. Kuhlmeier received her Masters of Science Degree from Brooklyn College and her Clinical Doctorate in Audiology from A.T. Still University of Health Sciences. Dr. Kuhlmeier holds the Certificate of Clinical Competence from the American Speech-Language-Hearing Association (ASHA) and is a fellow of the American Academy of Audiology.