

George Alexiades, MD

George Alexiades, MD, is the Director of the Cochlear Implant Center and an Associate Professor of Clinical Otolaryngology at Weill Cornell Medical College. He completed his medical education at New York University School of Medicine and then completed his residency in Otolaryngology and his fellowship in Neurotology at the New York University Medical Center. He spent 13 years at the New York Eye and Ear Infirmary and served as the Program Director. He is now the Director of the Cochlear Implant Center at Weill Cornell Medical College/New York Presbyterian Hospital. He has a special interest in all types of hearing restoration procedures in children due to congenital and acquired hearing losses.