Opening Plenary Session

8:45 a.m. to 9:45 a.m.

Our Global Future: Artificial Intelligence, Blockchain, other Innovations and the Outlook for New Technologies in International Law and the Legal Profession

Artificial Intelligence (AI) and blockchain are two technological trends that have already brought significant change and transformation across industries, governments and society in general. Predictably, the impact of these and other technological innovations has prompted the legal system to react and step in through different intervention strategies. Whereas the main regulatory and policy efforts regarding AI, blockchain, and other innovations have been carried out nationally, these technologies are not confined to any geographical boundaries. On the contrary, they flow across and above national jurisdictions. The importance of new technologies to international law is revealed by the recent launching by the U.N. Secretary General, of a comprehensive "Strategy on New Technologies" geared to build capacity, increase understanding, and develop normative frameworks that affect key areas of global concern such as privacy human rights, equality, sovereignty, transparency and accountability. This plenary discussion featuring a group of experts of diverse background and expertise on the intersection of technology and law, will consider the most critical issues related to AI, blockchain, and other new technologies concerning the present and future of international law and its impact on the legal profession.

Alter Ego and Veil Piercing in the United States and Abroad

The district court in Delaware recently found that a state-owned enterprise was the sovereign state's alter ego and allowed creditors of the sovereign state to reach the assets of its instrumentality. This is an important development for lawyers that help their clients recover value from defendants that attempt to hide or secrete their assets behind complex corporate structures. This panel will explore recent developments relating to alter ego and veil piercing theories. Panelists will also discuss whether such theories are available in other jurisdictions, including best practices and obstacles that U.S. lawyers should be aware of when litigating these issues abroad.

International Construction Arbitration – Mega Projects

This session will explore the various issues and challenges when dealing with "Mega" international construction projects and the arbitration and mediations that may arise during the course of the construction. The cultural impact on the process when there is the interplay between the common law and civil law traditions. How the exchange of information may be limited with parties from civil law jurisdictions where "Discovery" is not common consistent with international arbitration practice. Other areas where the parties' expectations may differ include witness examination, experts, written submissions, privilege concerns and amongst others the allocation of costs. Challenges may also arise when dealing with language and logistical issues and mediating with foreign parties.

Moderator: Dr. Patricia D. Galloway, AAA-ICDR Arbitrator and Mediator, Cle Elum, Washington

A New Sheriff in Town: The Increasing Importance of the EU in the Regulation of American Business

As the Trump administration works to reduce regulation in the United States, the European Union is exporting an increasingly aggressive regulatory regimen in a number of areas that significantly affect many US businesses. Probably the most far reaching recent EU regulation is the recent (May 25, 2018) amendment to its data privacy law known as the General Data Protection Regulation, or GDPR, which affects every company in the world that comes in contact with any of the 28 member states' citizens' data. With 508 million people, the EU has the power to set regulations that will affect most of the rest of the world. This panel will discuss how American companies can cope with competing regulations, the extent to which EU regulations will become de facto regulation in the US and what lawyers need to know to properly advise their clients.

Moderator: Brian Fraser, Akerman LLP, New York, New York

The Belt and Road Initiative: How China Is Constructing International Playgrounds and Creating the Rules for Those Playing on Them

China's most notable global gambit is President Xi's present incarnation of the ancient Silk Road and maritime Spice Routes. Officially announced to the world in 2013, this phenomenally ambitious initiative goes far beyond more than nine hundred infrastructure projects, transcontinental and multi-regional, to include railroads, highways, terminals, maritime ports, satellite navigation systems and all that promote economic development and global connectivity among high risk economies in most continents. Technology projects focused on cyber development, cyber regulation and internet public policies are highlighted in the Belt and Road Initiative. China has announced the establishment of specialized arbitration courts for Belt and Road projects in an effort to promote an exclusive legal system for disputes arising from these high profile billion and trillion dollar global projects. Yet the legal impact of every single project and its development and management is global. Indeed, China's ambitious venture is generating tremendous interest among professionals in the top specialty areas but none have the significance and gravitas that the international legal community brings to the table. The goal of this panel is to provide as much up-to-date and substantive information on this topic to the audience.

Moderator: Mikki Canton, AsiaAmericana International LLC, Miami, Florida

Closing Plenary Session

4:30 p.m. to 5:30 p.m.

Defending Defenders: Combatting Attacks on Lawyers, Judges, Journalists, and Other Human Rights Defenders through the Progressive Development and Implementation of International and Domestic Law

Sponsored by the ILS Committee on Public International Law, Human Rights and Global Justice

Human rights defenders are crucial to securing respect for and implementation of human rights; yet oftentimes their activities and advocacy on behalf of human rights makes them targets of discrimination, retaliation and violence. Human rights defenders can include a wide variety of persons occupying a multitude of positions in society, from lawyers defending unpopular parties, judges seeking to uphold the rule of law, journalists investigating official corruption, protestors demonstrating against human rights violations. This panel will examine international human rights and responsibilities regarding the protection of human rights defenders, the different ways in which defenders are exposed to repression, the international organs and tribunals with jurisdiction to remedy attacks upon human rights defenders, including the work of the Human Rights Council, the role of Human Rights Commissions in defending human rights and the circumstances under which government and military officials might be liable for prosecution in the International Criminal Court for attacks against persons participating in mass protests.

Moderator: Elizabeth M. Iglesias, Professor of Law, University of Miami School of Law, Coral Gables, Florida

Speakers: Emercio J. Aponte, Founder, AE Immigration Law Office, P.A., Adjunct Professor, FAMU College of Law, CEO, American Institute for Democracy, Justice, and Human Rights Education, Inc., Gainesville, Florida

Tamar Ezer, Associate Director and Lecturer in Law at the Human Rights Clinic at the University of Miami School of Law, Coral Gables, Florida
