Invisible Actors: The Role of Secretaries in International Arbitration

Arbitral tribunal secretaries are essential to the life of international arbitration. The complex nature of contemporary arbitration demands the intervention of individuals who provide not only administrative support to the arbitrators, but other skills to ensure the success of the proceedings. Very little attention has been paid to arbitral secretaries, with some limited exceptions. Recent cases such as the one involving the Yukos Oil Company have revealed the importance and controversial nature of arbitral secretaries who are perceived by some parties to act as de facto delegates of the arbitrators. This panel presentation will discuss issues regarding the role and duties of arbitral secretaries, their contribution to the development of arbitration, and the tensions arising from their participation.
