

Riverfront Family Church Spring Dinner

On the Monday before Easter, The Riverfront Family Church that worships Sunday mornings at The 224 EcoSpace, hosted a Community Dinner and invited friends and neighbors to come and share a meal. As Pastor Ben said in his blessing of the food at the beginning, they were “so looking forward to celebrating Easter that they were starting a week early.”

And so began the second recent community dinner hosted by Riverfront Family Church.

The last one was at Thanksgiving and it was a “huge crowd that filled the room” as Arunan Arulampalam, leader of the Worship team described it. It’s a wonderful event that brings together members of the faith community with local residents, and the food was great as well. A wide variety of meats, pastas, vegetables and fruits as well as a whole table full of desserts made for a feast for everyone there. And “everyone” included babies in strollers to seniors with walkers. Some groups sat at tables where they all knew each other and at other tables there were people meeting for the first time.

The plan is to continue this as a tradition, twice a year. Hopefully it will even catch on with other communities. Breaking bread together is a proven spiritual tradition that goes back millennia and a great way to break barriers as well.
