In 1907, Jewish immigrant Joel Russ arrived in New York City and, with a pushcart of herring, built a legendary destination for Jewish appetizing. Four generations later, the ancestral heart of the iconic Russ & Daughters continues to thrive on the Lower East Side, with three additional locations across the city.

Cousins Niki Russ Federman and Josh Russ Tupper, co-owners of Russ & Daughters, will be in conversation with local chef and writer Danielle Colen as we celebrate their new cookbook 100 Years of Appetizing.

The cookbook includes guides to its most famed offerings—smoked salmon, sable, sturgeon, herring, and caviar—plus over 100 recipes for latkes, matzo ball soup, babka, and bagels, among other favorites.
