APRIL HAMPTON

In 2014, after attending a Jewish Seder, A.W. Hampton, a resident of Montgomery, Alabama felt the desire to bring a condensed, unified history to African Americans that can be easily shared in one sitting over a “soul food” meal. She created the seder as a way to keep the legacy of her forefathers and mothers strong. She recognizes the importance of creating a table where others are invited to join, so they can gain the same understanding and appreciation for the African American community that she gained from the Jewish experience through the opportunity to participate at their table.
