Fuller Description of Services: The Barkai Center for Practical Rabbinics aims to improve the fabric of Israeli society by intensively training Israeli rabbis in all aspects of communal rabbinics so that they can lead their communities to a more meaningful connection with Judaism and act as a unifying force in Israeli society. During the war we had a natural network of over 100 rabbis (alumni of our program) and their communities to facilitate partnering with social services both government and private who are doing wonderful work in addressing the many needs that arose from the war. We were the natural conduit to reach the people in need through our communities. And that was our vision – building caring communities across Israel through training and empowering rabbis to have the skills and vision to build those communities. We continue to provide many post war services of all kinds through our rabbis and their communities.
