Share The Plate (STP) is a social justice initiative of the UUA that allows fellowships to support causes such as environmental justice, food insecurity, health care, and civil rights while demonstrating our UU values.

Beginning in June, 2026, OUUF will donate 50% of each week's undesignated offering to a featured local nonprofit organization, with a different recipient selected for each remaining month of 2026. The remaining 50% will support OUUF's general fund. After these seven organizations have been featured, the congregation will be invited to suggest future nonprofit recipients.

Research shows this is a win-win program — increasing support for local organizations doing important work in the community while also strengthening the congregation's general fund. Share The Plate offers another meaningful opportunity to live out our UU values and share from our abundance supporting important work in our community.

The following organizations have been selected by SAN for the first seven months of the program:

1. June - Dungeness Valley Health and Wellness Clinic - Jolie Will
2. July - Volunteer Hospice Of Clallam County - Mike Shonsey

Social And Racial Justice

3. August - Northwest Immigrant Rights Project Dorothy MacEachern

UU Specific Causes

4. September - Clallam Friends Together - George Will
5. October - UU Service Committee Mike Shonsey

Environmental Action

6. November - North Olympic Salmon Coalition – Brian Berardo
7. December - Olympic Climate Action - Emily Beals

We are excited to begin this new opportunity for collective giving and community partnership. Thank you for helping OUUF live our values through generosity and action.

In community and shared purpose,
