The Girl With The Leica

HELENA JANECZEK

A novel based on the life of Gerda Taro, a German-Jewish war photographer, anti-fascist activist, artist and innovator who, together with her partner, the Hungarian Endre Friedmann, was one half of the alias Robert Capa, widely considered to be the twentieth century's greatest war and political photographer. She was killed while documenting the Spanish Civil War and tragically became the first female photojournalist to be killed on a battlefield. Gerda Taro is at the heart of this kaleidoscopic novel but so is the era itself, the 1930s, the rise of Nazism, the cultural ferment, and the ascendency of photography as the age's quintessential art form.

"A story of bravery and determination that leaves us breathless and with a sense of emptiness, as if we have known [Gerda Taro] personally."—Repubblica

The Mental Load

EMMA

Most of us carry some form of mental load—about our work, household responsibilities, financial obligations and personal life; but what makes up that burden and how it's distributed within households and understood in offices is not always equal or fair. In her strips, Emma deals with themes ranging from maternity leave (it is not a vacation!) to domestic violence, to other feminist issues, in a straightforward way that is both hilarious and deadly serious. If you're not laughing, you're probably crying in recognition.

“Funny and relevant, this is a book to slip on all your colleagues’ desks.”—Elle

“Emma’s strong, smart, clear-eyed book gives us the language (and the urgent desire) to shout from the rooftops about the maddening, unacknowledged injustices women face every day. It validates all the thoughts I have about being a woman and didn’t have words for.”—Liana Finck, author of Passing for Human: A Graphic Memoir
