

I am so excited to offer piano lessons to students at The Marlowe School again this year! A little background about myself: My interest in music started at a young age with singing, and I have performed in choirs, church bands, small ensembles, and solos in several genres. I received my undergraduate degree in Music with Elective Studies in Business from the University of West Georgia, training in classical and musical theater, with a secondary in piano. I now give voice and piano lessons to students in the Atlanta area, along with performing. Lessons are catered towards the students interests and goals. I prefer to work out of the Faber or Alfred method books for piano lessons to introduce students to reading music and theory concepts, but we can always branch out and learn other fun songs. If a student is already working out of a book, we can pick up lessons from where they left off. The rate for lessons is $35 for 30 minutes.
