

NEW FORAGE SPECIALIST JOINS FORAGE & WILDLIFE SEED TEAM

FOCUS AREA INCLUDES AL, FL, GA, KY, NC, PA, SC, TN, & VA

Covington, Georgia native Drew Denman has joined the Pennington forage & wildlife seed team as Business Development Manager/Regional Forage Specialist. In this position, Drew will assist the independent sales team in growing Pennington's proprietary forage, wildlife and cover crop seed sales. Denman comes from a beef cattle background and holds a Bachelor's Degree in Animal Science from Montana State University. "Drew comes to Pennington with a strong background in production agriculture and service in the agricultural industry," says John Carpenter, Manager of Independent Sales for the eastern U.S. "While finishing his degree, Drew began full time employment with the American Simmental Association. While there, Drew worked with beef producers across the US and Canada and spent time working with the USDA. Upon graduation from Montana State, Drew accepted a job in the dairy industry with The Paul Mueller Company as a Regional Sales Manager. In 2014, he began work with Southeast Milk Inc., a regional milk marketing cooperative, serving dairy producers in the Southeast region in many facets," added Carpenter. With his background, Drew has a good understanding of the business, service and sales sides of the ag industry." While Denman will assist with proprietary seed promotion throughout the eastern half of the U.S., his primary focus area will be in Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Tennessee, and Virginia. He currently resides in Watkinsville, Ga. with his wife, Ashley and his two children - 11 year old Addison and 7 year old Jack. In his spare time, Drew enjoys spending time with his family and fly fishing - a hobby he picked up during his time spent in Montana.
