About the Speaker

As Director of the IRS Michigan District, Thomas Eastwood managed over 1500 employees and all IRS activities including criminal investigation, audit, collection, taxpayer service, and administration. He previously served as IRS Director in Milwaukee, Louisville, and Fargo. One of the youngest IRS executives ever to retire, he resides in Florida where he is a public speaker and university lecturer. Candid and willing to express his opinions, he enjoys helping people avoid difficulty with the most misunderstood, feared, and loathed US agency - the IRS. He also speaks extensively on counterintelligence topics, including espionage, interrogations, US intelligence, and Allied intelligence operations during WWII.
