AMEA actively supports economic and community development throughout its communities. They also support efforts to improve the quality of life and promote vibrant, active, economically-stable communities.

"AMEA is committed to helping our Member cities in securing long-term economic success," said Lisa Miller, Manager of Communications and Economic Development, AMEA, and chairman of the Main Street Alabama Board of Directors. "Our partnership with Main Street Alabama helps our Member cities do just that. It also provides them the tools and resources to have a broader understanding of how their downtowns contribute greatly to the bottom line of their cities. Downtowns serve as the engine for local economies. Not only do they generate sales and create jobs, but they also contribute to the quality of life as they serve the needs of residents, workers, and visitors."

Main Street Alabama greatly appreciates the partnership with AMEA.
