In today's global economy it is increasingly important for businesses to find a competitive advantage. It is evident that Manufacturers who invest in skills and training are realizing a return on their investment. For example, participation in the Fleming "Manufacturing Operations Program" allowed employees in a local manufacturing facility to implement the continuous improvement tools taught in the program. They were able to achieve a projected waste reduction by 75% which translated into a projected savings of $78,000 annually for the plant.
