Wisconsin Women in Government is excited to resume its annual Leadership Seminar, a unique and rich professional development program that provides an opportunity for participants to learn from LaFollette School faculty and interact with other government professionals with shared experience. Seminar participants will learn how to craft a layered and nuanced approach to navigating a rapidly changing workplace and the evolving expectations of public service while working in very visible organizations.

Women who work at the local, state or federal level of government or who interact with the government through private sector employment are encouraged to apply for admission into the Wisconsin Women in Government Leadership Seminar. The program provides two full days of leadership training, including instruction by University of Wisconsin La Follette School of Public Affairs faculty as well as opportunities for networking and mentorship. The small cohort allows for robust interaction with and meaningful feedback from faculty and other participants.
