Preaching to the Choir!

Most of you who receive this newsletter care about the work we do, and many are willing to stand up and be counted. Most of you share our principles and follow our mission. Our local programs and events mirror the direction we get from our national organization, which has grown to become the force we are today. But we must always look forward, find the best in America and leap into the future with flexibility of ideas and purpose.

Our membership has grown and now our participation needs to expand. I want NCJW/AZ to be part of a “bigger choir of activists and advocates.” You can help spread the word of our work by bringing a friend to a meeting or event or by sending us names to add to our mailing lists.

With today’s communication tools each of us can amplify our thoughts and actions by using more than just our voices. For example, it doesn’t cost anything extra to send one or 100 emails to share our messaging with someone who can then reach out on many levels. You never know who will become an activist who can reach out to voters or contact lawmakers to help us build a better America.
