

HERNDON-RESTON FISH, INC.

Providing local residents with Friendly Instant Sympathetic Help
since 1969

Kenneth R. Plum, Delegate to Virginia General Assembly

"When life's problems seem unsolvable, FISH finds a way to help. Helping FISH help others ensures that our community stays connected and strong."

Janet D. Howell, Senator to Virginia General Assembly

"Herndon-Reston FISH means having food, water, heat and shelter for families in crisis in Fairfax County. I can think of no other charitable organization that does so much for so many while putting every possible dollar donated towards the charitable goals for which the association was founded."

John Foust, Fairfax County Supervisor, Dranesville District

"We live in a community that cares about all our residents, especially those who are less fortunate and most in need. Herndon-Reston FISH converts caring into action. FISH provides immediate help that enables people facing crisis to stay in their homes, feed their families, and meet other essential needs. Many thanks to FISH and its wonderful and dedicated volunteers for the critical services they provide."

Catherine Hudgins, Fairfax County Supervisor, Hunter Mill District

"As our region becomes seemingly more affluent, it is important to have organizations such as FISH offering support, reminding us all that charitable giving at the local level is indeed still a necessity and a worthwhile venture in sustaining the lives and livelihood of all residents and families."

Anne Hochstrasser, Coordinated Services Planning, Dept. of Systems Management for Human Services

"Herndon-Reston FISH has been a key partner in meeting critical human service needs in the Herndon/Reston area. Working collaboratively with Fairfax County and other community based organizations, FISH's dedication to the residents of Fairfax County is evident in their continuing efforts to solve crises and assist those most in need."
