PROPERTY OVERVIEW

A Hollywood Icon, Primed for Its Next Chapter

5625 Melrose Avenue represents a rare reposition opportunity in a highly valuable location. This freestanding two-story commercial building sits at the intersection of Melrose Avenue and N. Larchmont Boulevard — one of the most recognizable corners in Hollywood. Built in 1928 with dramatic skylights and rooftop views of Hollywood, Larchmont Village, and Hancock Park, the property carries the authentic character of early Hollywood, and with it a rich history.

The 14,760 SF two-story building sits on 15,402 SF of land and benefits from a rare combination: a Melrose Avenue address at the top of Larchmont Blvd nestled among restaurants and mixed-use projects, on-site secured parking, and unmatched proximity to the entertainment industry's most active studio corridor. The site is zoned C4-1D, one of Los Angeles' most permissive commercial designations, supporting office, retail, medical, mixed/use*, and a broad range of creative uses.

Enriched with Old Hollywood history, 5625 Melrose Ave. was built in 1928 and originally served as a bathhouse through the mid-1940's. The building has most recently served as the longtime headquarters for the motion picture equipment house Alan Gordon Enterprises, one of Hollywood's most storied motion picture equipment firms serving major studios and productions. Prior to Alan Gordon Enterprises, the location was home to Spümcø, the renowned animation studio behind The Ren & Stimpy Show.

THE SETTING

Larchmont Village & Hancock Park Adjacent

Larchmont Boulevard — which runs directly from the gates of Paramount Studios south into Hancock Park — connects this property to one of LA's most beloved neighborhood retail and dining corridors. The surrounding trade area is defined by high-income professionals, entertainment industry workers, and a deeply walkable residential community that ranks among the most desirable in Central Los Angeles.

Hancock Park to the south is home to some of LA's most prominent residents, with tree-lined streets and homes from the 1920s-30s built for the original Hollywood elite. Windsor Square and Fremont Place immediately adjacent. The Wilshire Country Club anchors the neighborhood's western edge.

HOLLYWOOD OFFICE SUBMARKET

- Hollywood vacancy (23.1%) outperforms Downtown LA CBD (31.7%) and Non-CBD (31.0%)
- Office contractions here consistently less severe than Greater Los Angeles broadly
- Sustained entertainment industry demand from studios, streamers & production firms
- New creative office development (Echelon Studios, 606K SF) signals continued investor confidence

LOCATION

PROPERTY HIGHLIGHTS & IDEAL USES

Who belongs here — and why this building stands apart

Entertainment Pedigree

One block from Paramount. Netflix and Raleigh Studios just to the west. Built in 1928 — this building has been part of Hollywood's history for nearly a century.

C4-1D Zoning — Broad Use

One of LA's most permissive commercial designations. Supports office, retail, medical, entertainment, and a wide range of creative or institutional uses.

Elevator-Served Office

Full two-story floor plates with elevator access — rare for a building of this vintage. Suited for traditional office, creative, or professional services.

1928 Heritage Architecture

Early Hollywood construction with solid masonry bones. Authentic character that commands premium rents in the current creative office market.

Rare Reposition Opportunity — Owner/User or Investor

This site represents a rare reposition opportunity in a highly valuable location that is part of a dynamic and transitioning area in the heart of West LA.

On-Site Secured Parking

Secured side-yard parking on Melrose — a meaningful asset in this corridor where surface parking is increasingly scarce.
