TOMPKINS COUNTY IS HIRING!

DEPUTY DIRECTOR OF WORKFORCE DEVELOPMENT

Salary: $63,793 / 40 hours per week
Location: A hybrid arrangement of working on-site and at home is available

This is an exciting time for professionals in human resources management, experts in workforce training programs, and planners of local labor markets to re-imagine the world of work. The employment, education, and social aspects of the lives of Tompkins County residents have been affected by the global pandemic, and now is the time to ensure everyone has an opportunity to participate in the new economy.

The focus of the Tompkins County Workforce Development Board is to fully understand the revised skills needs of local businesses, the existing skills and aspirations of the local workforce, and how to best manage jobs that will continue to be done on a remote or work-from-home basis. In alignment with Ithaca Area Economic Development's Recovery Strategy, the Green Workforce Report for Tompkins County, and recent findings from Cornell University and Pathways to Careers (P2C Solutions), there will be special focus on:

- Re-training and out-skilling employees for new jobs,
- Expanding climate jobs and the green economy,
- Developing a new and dedicated approach to race, equity and inclusion, and
- Focusing on the employment of young people affected by the economic impact of 2020.

This is a strategic position, informed by good practice. As Deputy Director of Workforce Development, you will work closely with the Executive Director, the Board's staff, and Board Members to ensure the high-quality design and delivery of local workforce training programs. You will have a vision and voice on the career pathways that best achieve these modern economic goals.
