

Leslie Sorg Ramsay joined RWOP in 2016 when she moved to Prescott after 45 years in Washington DC. She held executive roles in communications/marketing with national/international organizations including The White House, trade and professional associations, US Information Agency, The Salvation Army, and as an executive recruiter.

After retiring to Prescott to focus on arts, Leslie was delighted to discover RWOP since she still is a political/news junkie. RWOP keeps her updated on Arizona politics while surrounded by educated GOP members.

Leslie is a painter, metal sculptor, and has volunteered for many arts organizations, including making props for 19 theater productions at PCA (Prescott Center for the Arts).

Born on Long Island, NY, Leslie moved to Washington DC in 1972 to work on President Nixon's Re-Election Committee (CREEP). She worked in The White House for Presidents Nixon and Ford. In 1979, she became Director of Communications for NFRW. After Reagan was nominated at the Republican National Convention, she worked at Reagan-Bush campaign headquarters, WH Transition staff and returned to the White House to work for President Reagan.

Leslie will share some of her experiences working in the White House.
