One: We come from all over, so many locations,

Many: So many identities, so many individuals.

One: Here, there, everywhere,

Many: And all of the places in between.

One: Yet here we are one community,

Many: We come together in the body of Christ, the center of life...

One: To listen, to question, to learn,

Many: We come together to worship and celebrate.

One: Whoever we are, wherever we are on our journey,

Many: We are welcome here.

All: Let us worship God together.

First Reading ~ Matthew 19:11-12

Not everyone can accept this teaching, only those to whom it is given. For there are eunuchs who have been so from birth, and there are eunuchs who have been made eunuchs by others, and there are eunuchs who have made themselves eunuchs for the sake of the dominion of heaven. Let anyone who can accept this, accept it.

Second Reading

~adapted from Rev. Elder Nancy Wilson in "Outing The Bible: Queer Folks, God, Jesus and the Christian Scriptures."

Does the Bible actually include references to or stories about LGBTIQQ folk consistent with what historians and anthropologists know about sexuality during biblical times? The answer is yes. Some stories are incontrovertible. Others are compellingly LGBTIQQ. And there are other characters, stories, and images that are curiously suggestive of same-sex relationships and gender non-conformity. All of these can empower LGBT people to embrace the Bible joyfully.

But it isn't easy. We are rejected, punished, and excluded by our families and churches, as well as by the larger society. In order to live, we have had to learn how to let go, grieve, survive, and forgive. In order to embrace the Bible joyfully, many people will have to forgive the Bible, as well as forgive those who have used it to hurt and punish and ostracize them.

Overcoming the fear and hurt and learning to forgive are necessary elements in a queer appreciation of the Bible. Obviously, not everyone will want to do it.
