VOCATIONAL VISIONS

IT'S THE LITTLE THINGS

MEET WILMA

After nearly eight years at Vocational Visions, Wilma has learned that providing great support starts with truly knowing each person. Because staff assignments rotate, she has gotten to know participants' individual habits, personalities, likes, dislikes, and behaviors—right down to the little things that make each person unique.

Wilma remembers the details: the activities someone enjoys, the movies they love, and when they may need a little extra time or patience. She also understands that communication looks different for everyone. Some participants communicate through words, while others use signs, pictures, or other cues. Wilma has even learned Spanish to better communicate with one of the individuals she supports.

For Wilma, meaningful support isn't always found in the biggest moments. It's in remembering, listening, understanding, and celebrating the small steps along the way.

This DSP Recognition Week, we celebrate Wilma for reminding us that sometimes, it's the little things that make the biggest difference. 💙
