

Natasha Dunn, Founder | Executive Director Black Community Collaborative

Natasha Dunn is the Founder and Executive Director of the Black Community Collaborative (BCC). BCC's mission is to close educational, economic, and health gaps that have historically disenfranchised Black communities. Grounded in research and connected by action, BCC's goal is to examine and dismantle structural racism to generate equity and parity for African Americans.

Natasha has over twenty years of experience working to empower Illinois residents. She has dedicated the majority of her life in service with Labor Unions, Chicago Public Schools, Grassroots Social Justice and Service Organizations. Natasha has organized residents and facilitated training for youth, parents, teachers and community leaders to improve conditions of Chicago neighborhood schools and parks. She is a data geek and strategist that enjoys connecting people to resources and opportunity. Natasha has been a guest speaker on CNN, Expo For Today's Black Woman, WVON, and The National Consumer League's Centennial Conference.

Natasha has a Bachelor's of Arts in Psychology from Shaw University in Raleigh, NC. She enjoys spending time with her family and friends, cooking, and traveling.
