

We are Alcohol Change UK

- Alcohol Change UK was formed from the merger of Alcohol Concern and Alcohol Research UK. Our new charity launched in November 2018.
- We believe that alcohol harm is not inevitable. Our vision is of a world free from serious alcohol harm.
- We aim to make change happen through:
 - Improved knowledge
 - Better policy and regulation
 - Improved drinking behaviours
 - Shifted cultural norms
 - More and better support and treatment.

ALCOHOL CHANGE

On your doorstep

- Survey of 636 14-17 year olds:
- 15 per cent who stated that they had previously bought or attempted to buy alcohol for themselves or someone else, said they have successfully bought alcohol online
- Over two thirds (68%) of these said they find it "easy" to do so
- South Wales Police test purchases operation:
- in 4 of the 9 cases, alcohol handed to 15 year olds without proof of age requested
- Industry response:
- "There are robust systems in place for age-restricted products purchased online, and delivery drivers are trained to ask for ID if they have good reason to believe that age is an issue"

Growth in buying alcohol online

"Impressive" online drinks uplift here to stay

By Andrew Catthorpe
Published: 08 June, 2020

The influx of new online shoppers looks set to be sustainable, with alcoholic drinks to the fore of this growth in ecommerce.

- Online grocery sales are booming
- In 2017, 21% of UK consumers had bought alcohol online, the third highest proportion in the world
- One in three British households shopped online for groceries during January 2021, with alcohol the fastest growing category
- Online alcohol sales are projected to represent a record 8.6% of total UK alcohol sales this year

Coronavirus: Online beer and wine shop reports 1,000 per cent surge in sales

Londoners have been stocking up on alcohol supplies during the coronavirus lockdown, with one online craft beer reporting a 1,000 per cent increase in sales.

Licensing law and online sales

Is the law clear?

- s146, Licensing Act 2003 makes it illegal in England and Wales to sell alcohol to anyone under the age of 18
- s151, Licensing Act 2003: No offence is committed where “the alcohol is delivered at a place where the buyer or, as the case may be, person supplied lives or works”
- Revised guidance issued under s182 of the Licensing Act 2003 (April 2018): it is the responsibility of the person serving or delivering the alcohol to ensure that age verification has taken place and that photo ID has been checked if the person appears to be less than 18 years of age”

ALCOHOL CHANGE[®]

Online age verification

- Current methods of age verification are “largely ineffectual”
- When implemented online, they often involve simple ‘honour’ checks, which are easily deceived, or alternative forms of ‘authentication’ that can be bypassed in various ways
- Introducing technical measures to prevent the sale of alcohol to under 18s would help increase the safeguarding of minors, reducing the possibility of obtaining alcohol online and bypassing existing checks.
- Despite several emerging technologies and promising developments in other domains such as online gambling and pornography, the simplest and most effective measure could be to extend the use of Merchant Category Codes (MCC codes) to re-purpose banks’ existing identity and age verification checks.

Comments from Wrexham students:

- "Amazon online - no ID - DoB only"
- "Pre-paid credit card"
- "Online Tesco's shopping; delivered; no ID check"
- "Lied about age on collection"
- "No ID needed"
- "Lied about age; no ID check"
- "Websites just asked for DOB or if you're over 18"
- "Adding alcohol onto Mum's weekly delivery without her realising"
- "No ID check from Amazon"
- "Ordered on Amazon and ASDA Online; no ID check at purchase or delivery"
- "Amazon account was someone's over 18; signed for by someone else"
- "Ordered off Amazon with Dad's credit card"

Survey data

- 8% of Wrexham students reported having themselves purchased alcohol online as under 18s
- 12% knew of others who had successfully done so

- 41% of 18-24 year olds respondents who had had alcohol delivered to their homes said that they were not asked for proof of age

ALCOHOL
CHANGE

In summary

- More and more UK consumers are buying alcohol online
- Online age verification controls are weak and easily bypassed by young people
- A minority of under 18s have successfully acquired alcohol in this way
- A lack of clarity in the law

Test purchases operation

- Independent audit company undertook 50 test purchases in Cardiff
- 4th – 27th February 2021
- Participants were aged 18 and 19 years old
- 12 different retailers audited
- Rapid deliveries only
- Alcohol ordered alongside food in majority of cases

Results

- Alcohol was handed to the 18- or 19-year-old recipients on the doorstep without requesting to see a valid photo ID to verify their age, on 36 of the 50 occasions – a compliance rate of 28%
- No individual retailer recorded a compliance rate of more than 50%, and two retailers recorded a 0% compliance rate
- On six of the 36 occasions on which a failure was recorded, the driver verbally requested the recipient's age and entered this in their device but did not request proof of age
- On no occasions was the alcohol left on the doorstep unattended

The experiences of UK delivery drivers

- Research explored the experience of delivery drivers, primarily working for app-based food and drink delivery services
- 12 in-depth, face-to-face Zoom interviews, lasting 45 minutes each. The respondents comprised 9 males, 3 females, all based in Wales
- 8 of the 12 respondents relied on their delivery role as their full-time job; the remainder used the role to 'top up' their main source of income
- The drivers were delivering exclusively on behalf of a major supermarket; Hermes, who deliver from hundreds of retailers; and app-based retailers such as Uber Eats and Deliveroo, collecting orders from convenience stores, a major supermarket and fast-food outlets

The experiences of delivery drivers

"I've never ID-ed anyone. I guess I only would if they looked quite young – but they're always clearly over the age of eighteen when I've turned up. It's never been an issue. I just assume that there's one kind of verification process when people are ordering it."

Rapid app driver

"I've had no reason to question their age. I imagine it does arise but we don't get given training. It's simply a case of pitch up, drop it off."

Rapid app driver

"We can leave it anywhere. We're not selling it, so it's nothing to do with us."

Hermes driver

"You don't want to be hanging around (to verify age) or taking orders back, it's a fuss you don't want to be bothered with."

Rapid app driver

"I haven't dealt with alcohol an awful lot and sometimes it's packed into the order, so I don't even know if it's there."

Deliveries to intoxicated persons

- Very difficult to determine whether someone ordering alcohol online is drunk
- Survey: 37% of respondents said they had sometimes been drunk at home when their online alcohol order arrived; on very few occasions did the delivery driver refuse to hand over the alcohol
- Research from Australia suggests:
 - Customers who use online rapid delivery services were more likely to report risky drinking and subsequent harm
 - 28% of respondents again said that they had been drunk on all, most or some occasions when successfully receiving their delivery
 - 28% of people who received a rapid delivery online order said they would have had to stop drinking if the delivery service was not available

The experiences of UK delivery drivers

"I probably have delivered to someone who is drunk. I can't think when. It doesn't mean to say they'll open the parcel at that point and drink it."

ALCOHOL

"If you see someone for ten or fifteen minutes in a pub, you can make a judgement on if they've had enough alcohol, but not when you knock on a door and interact for ten seconds, you can't tell - that's not my call to make, it's not my domain."

Rapid app development

"I imagine they'd get angry (if I refused to hand over the alcohol), they could say 'hold on, I've paid for this'. It could kick off quite horribly"

Rapid app driver

"How can you not serve to people who are drunk? It's [the law] broken all over the place."

Future developments

ALCOHOL
CHANGE

- In March 2021, call for proposals launched to explore how technology can improve or enhance achieving the licensing objectives for the sale of alcohol, including age verification
- Global alliance between leading drinks producers, online retailers and ecommerce platforms to introduce mechanisms to prevent underaged sales and sales to intoxicated individuals
- Possible test purchases operation to be undertaken by a police force in Wales in the coming months
- Alcohol Change UK's commissioned research to explore the experiences of delivery drivers in delivering alcohol; report to be published February 2022

Recommendations

ALCOHOL
CHANGE

- All retailers selling alcohol for home delivery must re-evaluate their internal controls, both at the point of sale (online) and point of delivery (the doorstep), to ensure people under 18 years old are not accessing alcohol by these means
- Police Forces and other bodies, such as Trading Standards teams, should be routinely undertaking test purchases operations to gauge retailers' ongoing levels of compliance
- Further research is required to examine the extent to which minors may be accessing alcohol in this way, and to ascertain what levels of support and training drivers receive regarding age verification and making deliveries to visibly intoxicated customers
- Licensing law (and/or accompanying guidance) relating to online alcohol sales needs revisiting to ensure it is fit for purpose in a retail landscape that is now vastly different to when the Licensing Act 2003 was first introduced in England and Wales.
