Democracy Wins - October 5, 2026

An Iowa judge dismissed Trump's lawsuit accusing The Des Moines Register and its former pollster of misrepresenting the state of the 2024 presidential race.

Republican Monae Johnson, South Dakota's secretary of state, crossed party lines to endorse a Democrat to succeed her.

The NAACP filed a lawsuit in federal court to ensure the administration doesn't violate federal law by sending armed federal agents to voting sites. It follows a similar lawsuit filed earlier last month by good government groups in conjunction with the city of Denver.

Three organizations representing thousands of ranchers in Texas, Oklahoma and Kansas issued a joint statement warning ICE operations are disrupting the agricultural community and will make beef prices spike again.

Flock is trying to shrink its workforce with employee buyouts after massive public backlash and cancelled contracts.

One month after a Honduran migrant was deported to a country in Africa that is not his country of origin, a federal judge in Colorado has ordered the U.S. government to return him to the United States and be released.

A U.S. District Court judge has granted a preliminary injunction blocking the Administration from gaining access to a database of state-owned records containing the sensitive personal information of 17 million drivers nationwide.