August 10, 2026 -Democracy Wins

The U.S. Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit ruled that the Trump administration cannot detain illegal immigrants inside the U.S. without bond hearings, rejecting its expansion of mandatory detention rules.

The DOJ lost another voter roll lawsuit in New Jersey. That makes them 0-18.

Daniel Boone Regional Library went ahead with its first "rainbow story time" for toddlers after Missouri's secretary of state threatened in writing to strip its state and federal funding. More than 100 residents showed up to support the library, chalking "love is love" messages on the sidewalk outside.

A collection of former Biden administration officials, academics and policy experts released what they describe as a counterweight to the conservative Project 202, the policy handbook written by many Trump administration officials. Its top focus? Climate action.

Nearly one-quarter of those who voted for Trump in 2024 now say they regret their vote (23%). This is up four points from 19% in late June.

The Arizona Supreme Court upheld the constitutionality of Proposition 211, a ballot measure to require special interests that buy advertisements for state and local elections to disclose their donors.

Gov. Tina Kotek has ordered Oregon to withdraw its land sale for a controversial data center near Salem.

Harrisburg, VA ended its contract with Flock. And over the last months people have cut down surveillance cameras owned by Flock with an electric saw in upstate New York, thrown paint on them in Oakland, California, and rammed a truck into them in Idaho.