

Adjunct Faculty Opportunity
American University
Department of Health Studies

The Department of Health Studies is seeking an adjunct faculty member to teach HLTH 300- Queering Health, during Fall Semester 2022. The course will be offered on-campus, in-person on Mondays and Wednesdays from 9:45-11:00 AM. We are seeking a candidate with experience teaching courses focusing on LGBTQI populations and health.

Candidates should have a master's degree in public health or a related field (Ph.D. preferred)

Interested individuals may send a cover letter and current CV to:

Jolynn Gardner, Ph.D., CHES
Associate Chair
Department of Health Studies
jgardner@american.edu

HLTH-300 Queering Health: Introduction to LGBTQI Populations and Health (3)

Introduction to the study of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, queer, and intersex (LGBTQI i.e., sexual and gender minorities) health. The course provides an overview of key historical and contextual events and issues that have shaped the experiences of sexual and gender minority populations. It also provides the opportunity to learn about the personal narratives and lived experiences of LGBTQI people. Students learn about disparities in mental and physical health experienced by sexual and gender minorities and develop a multidisciplinary understanding of the social, psychological, cultural, and structural determinants of health, health behaviors, and well-being of LGBTQI populations. AU Core Habits of Mind: Cultural Inquiry.