"Molo," she called, "Molo! Molo!"

Then she said, "Harry, Harry!" Then her voice rising "Harry! Please, Oh Harry!"

There was no answer and she could not hear him breathing.
Outside the tent the hyena made the same strange noise that had awakened her. But she did not hear him for the beating of her heart.

A CLEAN, WELL-LIGHTED PLACE

It was late and every one had left the café except an old-man who sat in the shadow the leaves of the tree made against the electric light. In the day time the street was dusty, but at night the dew settled the dust and the old man liked to sit late because he was deaf and now at night it was quiet and he felt the difference. The two waiters inside the café knew that the old man was a little drunk, and while he was a good client they knew that if he became too drunk he would leave without paying, so they kept watch on him.

"Last week he tried to commit suicide," one waiter said.

"Yhy?"

"He was in-despair."

"What about?"

"Nothing."

"How do you know it was nothing?"

"He has plenty of money."

They sat together at a table that was close against the wall near the door of the café and looked at the terrace where the tables were all empty except where the old man sat in the shadow of the leaves of the tree that moved slightly in the wind. A girl and a soldier went by in the street. The street light shone on the brass number on his collar. The girl wore no head covering and hurried beside him.

"The guard will pick him up," one waiter said.

"What does it matter if he gets what he's after?"

"He had better get off the street now. The guard will get him.

They went by five minutes ago."

The old man sitting in the shadow rapped on his saucer with his glass. The younger waiter went over to him.

"What do you want?"

The old man looked at him. "Another brandy," he said.

"You'll be drunk," the waiter said. The old man looked at him. The waiter went away.

killed himself last week." now. I never get into bed before three o'clock. He should have "He'll stay all night," he said to his colleague. "I'm sleepy the counter inside the café and marched out to the old man's table. He put down the saucer and poured the glass full of The waiter took the brandy bottle and another saucer from more," he said. The waiter poured on into the glass so that the of the pile. "Thank you," the old man said. The waiter took the league again. bottle back inside the café. He sat down at the table with his colbrandy slopped over and ran down the stem into the top saucer deaf man. The old man motioned with his finger. "A little "You should have killed yourself last week," he said to the

"He's drunk now," he said

"He's drunk every night."

"What did he want to kill himself for?"

"How should I know."

"How did he do it?"

"He hung himself with a rope."

"Who cut him down?"

"His niece."

"Why did they do it?"

"Fear for his soul."

"How much money has he got?"

"He's got plenty."

"He must be eighty years old."

"Anyway I should say he was eighty."

o'clock. What kind of hour is that to go to bed?" "I wish he would go home. I never get to bed before three

"He stays up because he likes it."

"He's lonely. I'm not lonely. I have a wife waiting in bed for

"He had a wife once too."

"A wife would be no good to him now."

"His niece looks after him. You said she cut him down." "You can't tell. He might be better with a wife."

> A CLEAN, WELL-LIGHTED PLACE

"I wouldn't want to be that old. An old man is a nasty thing." "Not always. This old man is clean. He drinks without spilling. Even now, drunk. Look at him."

"I don't want to look at him. I wish he would go home. He has no regard for those who must work."

over at the waiters. The old man looked from his glass across the square, then who was in a hurry came over. "Another brandy," he said, pointing to his glass. The waiter eigners. "No more tonight. Close now." stupid people employ when talking to drunken people or for-"Finished," he said, speaking with that omission of syntax

"Another," said the old man-

"No. Finished." The waiter wiped the edge of the table with a towel and shook his head.

ing half a peseta tip. leather coin purse from his pocket and paid for the drinks, leav-The old man stood up, slowly counted the saucers, took a

The waiter watched him go down the street, a very old man walking unsteadily but with dignity.

waiter-asked. They were putting up the shutters. "It is not half-"Why didn't you let him stay and drink?" the unhurried past two." "I want to go home to bed."

"What is an hour?"

"More to me than to him."

"An hour is the same."

drink at home." "You talk like an old man yourself. He can buy a bottle and

"It's not the same."

"No, it is not," agreed the waiter with a wife. He did not wish to be unjust. He was only in a hurry.

hour?" "And you? You have no fear of going home before your usual

"No, hombre, only to make a joke." "Are you trying to insult me?"

down the metal shutters. "I have confidence. I am all confi-"No," the waiter who was in a hurry said, rising from pulling said. "You have everything "You have youth confidence, and a job," the older waiter

"Exerything but work." "And what do you lack?"

"You have everything I have."

"No. I have never had confidence and I am not young."

"Come on. Stop talking nonsense and lock up all those who need a light for the night." waiter said. "With all those who do not want to go to bed. With "I am of those who like to stay late at the cafe," the older

"I want to go home and into bed."

I am reluctant to close up because there may be some one who needs the café." now dressed to go home. "It is not only a question of youth and confidence although those things are very beautiful. Each night "We are of two different kinds," the older waiter said. He was

"Hombre, there are bodegas open all night long."

shadows of the leaves." is well lighted. The light is very good and also, now, there are "You do not understand. This is a clean and pleasant cafe, It

"Good night," said the younger waiter.

a man was nothing too. It was only that and light was all it stand before a bar with dignity although that is all that is pronot want music. Certainly you do not want music. Nor can you but it is necessary that the place be clean and pleasant. You do never felt it but he knew it all was nada y pues nada y nada y needed and a certain cleanness and order. Some lived in it and vided for these hours. What did he fear? It was not fear or dread. nadas and nada us not into nada but deliver us from nada; this nada our daily nada and nada us our nada as we nada our kingdom nada thy will be nada in nada as it is in nada. Give us pues nada. Our nada who art in nada, nada be thy name thy It was a nothing that he knew too well. It was all a nothing and continued the conversation with himself. It is the light of course "Good night," the other said. Turning off the electric light he > sure coffee machine. He smiled and stood before a bar with a shining steam prespues nada. Hail nothing full of nothing, nothing is with thee.

"What's yours?" asked the barman

"Nada."

"Otro loco mas," said the barman and turned away.

"A little cup," said the waiter.

The barman poured it for him.

ished," the waiter said. "The light is very bright and pleasant but the bar is unpol-late at night for conversation. The barman looked at him but did not answer. It was too

"You want another copita?" the barman asked room. He would lie in the bed and finally, with daylight, he only insomnia. Many must have it. would go to sleep. After all, he said to himself, it is probably thing. Now, without thinking further, he would go home to his bars and bodegas. A clean, well-lighted café was a very different "No, thank you," said the waiter and went out. He disliked