

With hockey season starting in about two weeks, the OHIO Hockey Team needs one journalism intern who can write engaging articles, recapping the team's 37+ games, as well as covering team activities and events.

Cole Bell, the new Head Coach for the OHIO Hockey Team, wrote: We have a tremendous following, passionate fans and 62-years worth of alumni. We are striving every day to continue to reach them in various ways. We have many things established, including a strong website and social media following. One thing we try to do is constantly put out information about what the team has been up to and especially the results of our games. With so much information to be put out, there would be an excellent opportunity for a young journalism student to gain valuable experience reporting on our team, recapping events, and conducting interviews with players and staff.

Coach Bell will be the internship supervisor and evaluator. If you are interested in applying for this sports internship opportunity, please contact Coach Bell directly:
