

Make your mark in Minneapolis

Program details

The Star Tribune newsroom offers one of the best internship programs in our industry. We select college and graduate students for 10-week summer positions as reporters, multimedia producers, copy editors/multiplatform editors, designers, videographers and photographers.

- Interns are paid as first-year professionals, $750 a week.
- Students get real-world experience in a major daily newsroom. We have hired several of our former interns.
- Our interns work challenging assignments, learn about all areas of the newsroom, and staffers present weekly sessions on their crafts.

Star Tribune

- Is Minnesota's largest newsgathering company. More than 250 journalists contribute to one of the largest newspapers in the U.S., the most-visited local website, more than a dozen digital platforms, and 100+ social media channels.

- Covers our region's diverse mix of Fortune 500 companies, vibrant theater and arts scene and six major league sports teams.

Qualifications

We're looking for skilled journalists who have demonstrated they are prepared to work as professionals.

Most successful applicants have completed junior or senior year of college, worked for a college news outlet AND interned with at least one professional daily news organization.

Apply

Upload your online application, links and recommendation letters by Nov. 1 for summer internships.

We recruit nationally for this program and select talented, driven college and graduate students who have experience covering breaking news and enterprise stories.

Learn more and apply online at StarTribunecompany.com/jobs

Questions?

Colleen Stoxen
612-673-7467
cstoxen@startribune.com

TOP: Multimedia intern Alex Kormann covered breaking news during flooding in Superior, Wis.
LEFT: Metro reporting intern Lydia Coutre interviewed the commissioner of the Minnesota Department of Commerce.