Ohio University/ Scripps College Internship for Fall Semester 2019

NBC's TODAY SHOW, a mix of news and entertainment, is offering a paid internship for Fall Semester in the 2019-2020 academic year for a student in the Scripps College of Communication. An internship with "Today" offers a student an inside look at a live morning television program.

Description:

Interns work closely with staff researchers, associate producers and producers in many aspects of production. Interns could be asked to screen and to log tapes, make research calls, compile statistics and to work with editors compiling clip reels.

The intern will also be expected to complete tasks in the office including but not limited to answering phones, distributing mail, copying research for talent, making dubs of show segments and going out on show-related errands. During the internship, the student will go out on an occasional shoot, observe the process and then sit in on an edit session and see the final product air.

Application Details: Deadline is Friday, April 26.

Students who are interested should submit a résumé and professional cover letter (one pdf file) to Karen Peters, Internship & Student Services Specialist, via email: petersk@ohio.edu No references are needed.
