Washington State Grad Ministry Launched!

Prayer Requests & Praises:

-There are only 14 students in Prosthetics and Orthotics, one of the smallest departments for grad students at Georgia Tech. The amazing thing is that 8 of them are now involved in Cru. One recently placed his faith in Christ, and a few others seem close. Please pray for this department (pictured above with Chad).

-Thank you for your prayers for our new grad ministry launch at Washington State! We're off and running!

-For our kids' health!

One of our roles with Cru is to help pioneer new campus ministries, and this fall two new opportunities have come up.

This past summer, a grad student named Ua Ruedy served on our staff team on the Lake Tahoe Summer Mission as an intern. During the summer, she shared with us that she felt led to launch a new grad ministry at the Elson Floyd College of Medicine (the medical school of Washington State University in Spokane, WA).

Chad spent some time training her while we were in Tahoe on how to pioneer a new ministry, and he's spent the last six weeks distance coaching her.

Last week, Ua sent Chad an exciting text that Cru is now an officially recognized student group on her campus, and she had her first Bible study last week!

The second opportunity, which we shared in our last prayer letter, is a new ministry called Design. Design is Cru's ministry geared especially for South Asian American students. There are hundreds of South Asian American students at Georgia Tech, and there are few involved in any of the current campus ministries.

Chad has been mentoring a couple of South Asian American grad students, and we're planning on trying to launch Design at Tech this month. Please pray for this new launch!

Adventures of the Young Ones

Our kids are really growing up. It's amazing how quickly we went from diapers and preschool groups to driver's licenses, high school decisions, and college visits. Clark is wrestling with what high school to attend (magnet or regular), but our vote is that he goes to the closest in proximity since he tends to be both forgetful and very involved in lots of extracurricular activities. In Atlanta, the less driving, the better!

Evelyn will be 11 this month! She and Josilynn have started the countdown to Evelyn's birthday. Of course, Clark will turn 14 the next day, so there will be lots of celebrating. The girls are very close and are quick to encourage one another (see picture to the right). Evelyn was working on long division and wasn't enjoying the process. Fortunately, she has a sister who is a natural cheerleader. Her sign says, "You can do it, Evelyn!"
