Snoop targets grades of minorities

African American leaders called Wednesday for a state search for ways to begin closing the gaps in education between white and minority students.

"The first thing they have to do is they have to see what other states are doing," said Howard and Enis Ragland, a Milwaukee couple who are parents of five children and members of the Urban League of Greater Madison.

"This is an opportunity for us to do that," said Ragland. "We have a lot of work to do, but we can do it.

"There are a lot of students who fall through the cracks early on. Many of them are black. And we are hardly interested in their education," said Ragland.

"We are interested in improving the performance of students of African American descent. And we are working to make it happen," said Howard.

"We are working to make it happen," said Howard. "We are working to make it happen," said Howard. "We are working to make it happen," said Howard.
