A Milwaukee school that will be converted into a new home for city seniors remains a fire hazard while the city waits for the school to be turned over.

The school, at 3902 East Washington Avenue, was built in 1956 and added to in 1971. The buildings are in such bad shape that the city's building inspector refused to issue a certificate of occupancy.

The school's closure was announced last month, and the city's building department is scheduled to turn it over to the city's community development department. The city plans to convert the school into a new home for seniors.

The school has been closed since last month, and the city is waiting for the building department to turn it over.

The school is located near a number of other buildings that have been closed for various reasons, including a nearby school that was closed last month.
