Centerstone Recovery Center

Residential Treatment Program for Women with Substance Use Disorders

Centerstone is excited to offer a women's residential treatment program. The voluntary program provides innovative, comprehensive, holistic, long-term recovery options in a beautiful country setting. Emphasis will be on building skills for long-term sobriety, employment readiness, improved relationships, parenting, emotion management, and community integration.

The residential portion of the program will be based on individual need and can be up to 30 days. Following residential treatment, Centerstone will connect clients to services in their community of choice. Transition of care will include shelter, food, connection to primary care physicians, transportation, recovery, employment and health coaching, and individual and group therapy based on need.

Centerstone will implement multiple treatment approaches to increase clients' long-term recovery skills. We are committed to clinical excellence and programming will utilize evidence-based practices.

Services include:

- Comprehensive bio-psychosocial assessment
- Group and individual therapy
- Group and individual life skills training
- Family education programming
- Family therapy sessions
- Psychiatric evaluation
- Medicated Assisted Treatment (MAT)
- Medication training and support
- HIV testing, education, and prevention
