

Introducing New Resources From Your Resource Center

Searching for Sunday: Loving, Leaving, and Finding the Church, Rachel Held Evans, (Nelson Books)

Evans is disgruntled and with the church. This book is about her journey to understand the church and her place in it. As she reveals her journey, she also exposes her own rough relationship with the church. She shares her many concerns, frustrations as well as hopes with her peers. Evans offers a road map back to church through stories about baptism, confession, and communion.

Genesis: A Living Conversation, Bill Moyers, (PBS, Athena) DVD set

Bill Moyers and PBS present a discussion of Genesis with ten 56-minute episodes of informal, small-group discussions of the major stories of Genesis from the perspectives of accomplished leaders from various faith traditions.

Church Mergers: A Guidebook for Missional Change, Thomas G. Bandy and Page M. Brooks, (Rowman & Littlefield)

The authors follow the imaginary journey of several churches considering merging. They provide careful step-by-step instructions for discerning if a merger is right for your church. This book is good for the revitalization of a congregation even if it is not planning on merging with another congregation.

Communication in the Church: a Handbook for Healthier Relationships, Thomas G. Kirkpatrick, (Rowman & Littlefield)

This work targets communication within a church so that members and leaders may have more effective communication. It offers guidelines to help readers become better in building relations, experience trust, practice forgiveness, use power, and bridge cultures. Kirkpatrick uses the latest social science research data.
