There has been story after story of criminal activity in local churches, synagogues and mosques. Being aware and prepared is our best option to keep our places of worship safe. On Saturday, October 5, from 9:00 a.m.-12:00 p.m., the First Presbyterian Church of Charleston will host a “Church Safety Workshop” for currently serving Ruling Elders, Trustees, and Ordained Ministers and other Presbyterian church leaders entrusted with the faithful stewardship of people and property. If you are committed to learning more about church safety, and developing a plan for your Presbyterian congregation, you are most welcome to join us. The cost is free.

Our leader for the “Church Safety Workshop” is Rob Yandow. Rob Yandow is a former law enforcement officer, a Fusion Liaison Officer with the West Virginia Intelligence/Fusion Center, the public policy leader for the Faith Based Security Network and a trained security instructor. This workshop will assist church leaders, in working with their Session, in the development of safety and security teams, security protocols and response to emergency situations to include active shooter, medical emergencies, fire and weather-related disasters.
