

A Year in Recap

This year has been a challenging year for the electrical contractors in Saskatchewan.

With manufacturer product shortages, tight competition on projects, increased material costs and other challenges related to Covid19 it has been a difficult year for everyone to say the least.

However, as I was told 10 years ago when I entered the Saskatchewan electrical industry ... Look after the electrical industry and its clients, the people, will look after you.

I feel like that statement remains true for everyone. I have had the opportunity to meet with hundreds of people in our industry this year. Time and time again I hear more success stories than I hear misfortune. Our contractors and our people in Saskatchewan are resilient. When Covid-19 first hit our province we all learned to adapt, there's been many challenges overcome and many lessons learned since then.

The power is still on, projects are still being completed day by day and we're learning to work together more as a team in the electrical industry than I have ever seen before.

This year working for RS Breakers & Controls I've been on the road meeting with contractors, attending site visits and helping with product shortages. We've supplied thousands of circuit breakers and been the solution in hundreds of weekend emergency calls.

As more and more products become obsolete and product shortages get worse, it's important to have a Canadian company with inventory ready to ship to get the job done.

Founded in 2006, RS Breakers & Controls has become the largest circuit breaker wholesale center in Canada. Supplying millions of breakers coast to coast.

We carry all the brands you will see on any commercial or industrial site. We're also specialists when it comes to outdated equipment and commonly supply like-for-like replacements that require no modification of existing systems.

The RS team wishes you a Merry Christmas!
Hoping for no emergencies over the holidays.
But as always don't be afraid to reach out.
