$58,700 Grants Awarded in Chequamegon Bay Region

The grants support local food availability, trails, covid-response, and summer youth camps

BAYFIELD—The Apostle Islands/Chequamegon Bay Community Funds announced sixteen grants totaling $58,700 to local nonprofits and the City of Ashland for community-based programs.

"We are honored to distribute these grants which help sustain our vibrant, healthy communities," said Ruth Oppedahl, director of the Community Funds. "These grants are possible because of the generous contributions of donors who have supported our endowments over the last twenty-one years and counting. Their endowment funds continue to grow as time goes on."

Several projects respond to the interest of growing and sharing local food.

The CORE Community Resources through its new "Community Harvest" program will supply the Bayfield Food Pantry with fresh produce, grown by community members in their home gardens or in community gardens

Akiing 8th Fire will collaborate with the Madeline Island Community Garden and St. John's UCC Food Shelf, to expand its production capacity by growing, harvesting, and distributing its farm products on Madeline Island using traditional indigenous and regenerative agricultural practices.

The Madeline Island Gardening Project's "Growing Forward: Building Island Food Sovereignty" will build on last year's success by continuing to expand member education and school outreach programs, and further improve growing spaces accomplished by manager Janet Moore and countless volunteers.

Other grants focus on social opportunities, outdoor recreation, and Ojibwe history.

An Adult Hobby Club will be established at the Washburn Club (the old Dupont Club). This program will help gather and engage senior citizens in arts, crafts, games and exercise, as well as providing time and space for socializing and community building. Northwest CEP is planning two summer youth camps; one focusing on adolescent girls and one focusing on "at risk" youth. Funds will be used for materials including Covid protection masks, face and shields as well as gear: boots hats/helmets and small tools. Landmark Conservancy is engaging the public on trail planning around the Brownstone Trail.

After missing a summer of outdoor shows at the tent, the Lake Superior Big Top Chautauqua will be providing free transportation and tickets inviting tribal members from the Bad River and Red Cliff tribes to attend their new show, "Anishinaabe", about the history of the Ojibwa people in northern Wisconsin
