Pope Francis Resumes Duties After Surgery

Rome — A month after being hospitalized for colon surgery, Pope Francis resumed his weekly public audiences Wednesday, using the event to mark the anniversary of the Beirut Port explosion and to reiterate his intention to visit Lebanon. A smiling Francis walked without assistance before a crowd of several hundred tourists and pilgrims in a Vatican auditorium, where he recalled the "victims, their families, the injured and all those who lost homes and work" in the Beirut blast.

During his recovery at the hospital, Francis prayed the Angelus prayer from a 10th-floor balcony before well-wishers gathered below.

He was discharged July 14.

His work schedule gets busy in September, when he plans to visit Hungary and Slovakia for four days. In November, he'll make a quick stop in Glasgow, Scotland, to participate in the U.N. climate change conference known as COP26. Other possible trips are also under review.

The 84-year-old pope suffers from an ailing hip and sciatica that causes him to limp. He also had part of one lung removed when he was a young man but has otherwise enjoyed relatively robust health.

The pope has expressed his desire to visit Lebanon several times, including while aboard the papal plane after a trip to Iraq in March.
