

SMDM Fellowship in Medical Decision Making

The overarching goal of the SMDM Fellowship in Medical Decision Making is to build a cohort of future leaders with the skills to effectively apply decision science to research, to practice and to health policy.

The Fellowship provides three years of support to clinical research fellows, doctoral candidates and post-doctoral fellows with a proven commitment to decision sciences and for whom lack of financial resources presents barriers to ongoing engagement in SMDM.

The SMDM Fellowship

1. Supports early career researchers preparing them to thrive in the field of medical decision making.
2. Creates a cohort of future leaders and aids in developing their potential to influence clinical practice and health policy.
3. Provides extensive exposure to innovation in medical decision science along with mentorship by leaders in the field.

WHO SHOULD APPLY?

Applicants should be committed to a career in decision oriented research and will be considered in two categories:

- Clinicians who have completed a residency training program and who are embarking on or currently pursuing a clinical research fellowship with research supervised or mentored by an SMDM member and who plan to pursue a research career.
- Doctoral candidates or post-doctoral fellows who are embarking on or currently pursuing research under the supervision of an SMDM supervisor/mentor.

FELLOWS RECEIVE

- Stipends for salary support, research and travel.
- Participation in SMDM meetings and activities.
- Mentorship in peer-review of abstracts and manuscripts.
- Networking and career development opportunities.
