JUNE - SEPARATING THE WHEAT FROM THE POLITICAL CHAFF

The fiscal and monetary forces set forth by the government are epic. There is more coming. No doubt the largesse has something to do with the pandemic and something to do with the reality of this being an election year. Both are profoundly powerful forces that will shape the economic landscape not only for the second half of 2020 but also for 2021 and beyond.

JULY - RECOVERY & EVENTUAL GROWTH VERSUS DEPRESSION

COVID-19, unprofitable oil prices, extreme government responses, horrific economic data, and unintended consequences make seeing into the future more precarious than ever at a time when a measure of clarity is imperative. We will look at the most up-to-date, forward-looking data to discern where we are going and what the near-term indications are for the economy.
