EVENT PROGRAM

Slowing the School to Juvenile Justice Pipeline

Part I: What do we know about the links between suspensions, expulsions and justice involvement?
Part II: What can we do to slow the school to juvenile justice pipeline?
Part III: "Next Steps" and discussion of our five-county project that includes Santa Clara

Social - Emotional Learning

A discussion to understand youth behaviors in the context of social-emotional learning and skills. How do we use "teachable moments" to build capacity in youth for self-management, self-awareness, responsible decision-making, relationship skills, and social awareness.

Social Media, Safety and the Law

Covering a wide range of issues from how our kids communicate, online bullying, sexting and criminal activity to how kids are publishing on the internet, school and law enforcement investigations and how these issues play out in the Courts.

Angela Irvine, PhD, has more than 20 years of experience in education and social policy, spent four years as research director at the National Council on Crime and Delinquency (NCCD), and currently works as a Vice President at Impact Justice, a national research and innovation center, where she is continuing to develop community-based responses to school discipline infractions, low-level offenses, and violent crime.

ShaKenya Edison is a professional educator committed to establishing high expectations, vertical and horizontal accountability, and shared responsibility in improving the education system and overall outcomes for students.

Angela Alvarado has been a deputy district attorney in Santa Clara County for 17 years and a state-wide instructor for law enforcement on the topics of sexual assault and child abuse for over 10 years.
